Topographic Maps Of

The Geological Survey

How many people would like a map of the district in which they live. Surely there are very many who would find convenient such a possession. To the people of many districts in the United States such a map—accurate, detailed, and of moderate size—is available for the small sum of five cents.

The U. S. Geological Survey is making a topographic map of the United States. This work has been in progress since 1882, and about 3-10 of the area of the country has been covered. The surveyed districts are widely scattered throughout the country. When the atlas is finally completed, every citizen of the United States may procure a federal map of his particular environment.

This great map is being published in atlas sheet of convenient size, which are bound by parallels and meridians. The four-cornered division of land corresponding to an atlas sheet is called a quadrangle. The sheets are approximately of the same size, the paper dimensions being 20x16 1/2 inches. Three scales however, have been adopted. The largest scale of nearly 1 mile to 1 inch is used for thickly settled or industriously important parts of the country. For the greater part of the country an intermediate scale of about 2 miles to 1 inch is employed. A third and still smaller scale of about 4 miles to one inch has been used in the desert regions of the far west. A few special maps on larger scales are made of limited areas in mining districts.

The features shown on these maps may be classified in three groups: (1) water, including seas, lakes, ponds, rivers and other streams, canals, swamps, etc; (2) relief, including mountains, hills, valleys, cliffs, etc; (3) culture, that is works of man, such as towns, cities, roads, railroads, boundaries, etc. All water features are shown in blue, relief in brown and cultural features in black.

The sheets composing the topographic atlas are designated by the name of a principal town or of some prominent natural feature within the district.

They are sold at 5 cents each when fewer than 100 copies are purchased, but when they are ordered in lots of 100 or more copies, whether of the same sheet or of different sheets, the price is 3c each. Applications should be accompanied by the cash or post-office money order, not postage stamps, and should be addressed to the Director U. S. Geological Survey, Washington, D. C.

Shrieking and Shooting.

It is a comfort to realize when we hear people talking about "the good old times that used to be," that in some respects, at least, we show more common sense to-day. One instance is our attitude toward women. There was a time when a woman was expected to shriek and faint in almost any emergency. It was even considered an attractive exhibition of dependence. To-day we pardon lack of nerve and self-possession in a woman about as little as in a man. The girl who rides and shoots has taken the place of the girl who used to shriek and faint. No small factor in bringing this welcome change about has been the campaign carried on by the J. Stevens Arms & Tool Co., Chicago Falls Mass, makers of the famous Stevens firearms, who have introduced our girls to the healthy, upbuilding sport of outdoor shooting. The company have issued a catalog illustrating many varieties of lightweight rifles, shotguns and pistols which girls all over the country are using to-day. It contains much useful and interesting information on such points as the selection, care and testing of firearms, besides notes on ammunition targets, etc. This book of reference will be sent free to any one sending four cents in stamps, to cover postage.

Jared Morgan Matheny.

Died at the County hospital in Chicago, on Saturday, May 19, 1906 Jared Morgan Matheny, second child of Jno B and Margaret Matheny, aged 60 years, 4 months, 10 days.

Mr Matheny's death was due to a distressing accident that occurred on Friday evening. He was riding on a trolley car on Halsted St. between Monroe and Adams, when he was brushed off by a heavy truck wagon. He was picked up and conveyed to the County Hospital, where it was found that his back was broken, and he died on Saturday morning.

Jared Morgan Matheny was born in Woodstock, Ill, Jan 3 1846, leaving here in 1868 for Chicago, where he resided until so suddenly summoned. He was married in 1871 to Lizzie Brown. He was married the second time in 1905 to Mrs Matilda Deck, the widow who survives.

Mr Matheny's first employment in Chicago was on the street cars, which he followed about ten years, when he entered a machine shop, and has since been an expert workman in that line.

Besides the bereaved widow and his aged mother, the latter a resident of this city, he leaves two brothers and three sisters: J M and J. W. Matheny, of Woodstock; Mrs Belle Withrell, of Kokoma, N Y; Mrs Margaret Wilson, of Chicago and Mrs Mary Murphy, of Elgin, widow of the late A J Murphy.

The remains were brought to this city and the funeral was held from the home of W H Shipton on Monday, Rev Thos G Cocks officiating, the interment being in Oakland cemetery.

Mr Matheny was an honest, industrious and exemplary citizen, and the bereaved relatives have the sympathy of many friends in this city.—McHenry County (Ill) Republican.

Some of the old citizens of our county, doubtless remember, that Jno B Matheny and family, then consisting of himself, his wife and daughter, Mary, left the old homestead, on Back Creek, and went west. In 1844, he with his little family settled near Woodstock, Ill, where he died on Feb 4, 1853, and it is rather remarkable that from this date, up to the date of the sad taking off of the subject of the above sketch, a period of over 53 years, no death summons came to any member of the family.

The deceased was a nephew of Capt J C Matheny, of Monterey.

Deadly Serpent Bites

are as common in India as are stomach and liver disorders with us. For the latter however, there is a sure remedy: Electric Bitters, the great restorative medicine of which S A Brown, of Bennettville S C says "They restored my wife to perfect health, after years of suffering with dyspepsia and a chronically torpid liver." Electric Bitters cures chills and fever, malaria, biliousness, lame back, kidney troubles and bladder disorders. Sold on guarantee by K H Trimble. 50c

WANTED—Three or four good driving horses, ages from five to 10 years. Phone or address this office for information.

Frem Staunton Argus

The Argus states that the Board of Supervisors, at their last meeting adopted the state law to regulate the running of automobiles in Augusta Co. It limits the speed to 15 miles an hour, and when nearing curves in the road and the summit of hills the speed must not be over 8 miles an hour. The driver is required to stop when nearing horses and in case of frightening must then lead the horses by the machines and keep it standing until the horse has gone a safe distance from it.

During the past several weeks the legislative committee appointed to examine into the affairs of the State Hospital at Williamsburg have been at work and a great many witnesses have been examined, the lady attendants in the last day or two.

Extravagance in the matter of buying supplies has been shown. One woman and some men patients were drenched in deep water to force submission. The worst aspect of the whole mess was the burning of male patients with caustic to prevent their engaging in a nameless act between themselves. Three should have been kept in each cell instead of two to prevent this.

A new rule of the postoffice department reads thus: On and after July 1, 1906, patrons of the rural delivery service will be required to display signals on their boxes when they leave mail in them for carriers to collect, as after that date carriers when serving their routes will not be required to open and examine any mail boxes except those to which they have mail to deliver and those on which signals are displayed to indicate there is mail for carriers to collect.

Clerk.

Care of the Fowls.

Eggs are what we want, they mean profit; so treat the hens well, keep them warm and well fed and they will show their appreciation in return.

Why not have the poultry feed in the poultry house or near when the weather is bad?

Give plenty of water. Laying fowls require it and on very cold days the chill should be taken off.

Keep the hens active, a lazy hen is never a laying one. Cut straw, hay or dry leaves should be scattered on the floor of the run and grain feed should be thrown in this so that the hens will be kept scratching.

Although the fowls need the fresh air and sunshine, they should not be allowed to go out doors while there is snow on the ground or in any way be exposed to raw, windy weather. The result would be a loss of eggs.

Laying hens need something to take the place of the bugs they pick up during the summer. Cut bone answers this purpose very nicely.

Meat of some kind is a necessity for the best results with laying hens. Remember, air the poultry house every day and also keep it clean. It is as necessary as feeding the fowls.

Fowls for Home Use.

A small flock will prove more profitable, in proportion to numbers, than a large one. This enables those who live on small areas to procure eggs at nominal cost. The same amount of food given to a pig and a flock of hens for comparison will give better results with the fowls than with the pig, to say nothing of the fact that the flesh of poultry is superior to that of the hog, while greater cleanliness is also secured. There is no good reason why every suburban resident should not keep a small flock of fowls, whether his area is large or small.

Salt is as essential to the horse as is to other stock, and should be kept within reach or put in the feed once a day.

To Cure a Cold in One Day

SATURDAY NIGHT TALKS

By F. E. DAVISON

A BROKEN-HEARTED CRY.

June 8, '06—(Mark 7:24-30.)

Parentage is a great joy; it is also a vast responsibility. There is nothing that so agitates the great deep of the heart as to bend over an infant in its cradle, with the knowledge that its whole future career depends upon you, and that you will be the architect of its destiny in a very real sense. In view of all the perils that hover about the feet of innocent childhood, the wonder is that so many turn out well.

One of the saddest incidents in the life of Christ is his interview with the Canaanite woman in the region of Tyre and Sidon. Most of those who sought the Great Physician were themselves afflicted with disease. They came because they were in pain, or helpless and distressed. They were deaf or blind or leprosy and they pleaded for personal relief. This woman came for an absent daughter, and so great was the grief of the mother for her suffering child, that she made her case her own, crying, "Have mercy on me," as if what was done for the sick one would be accepted as a personal benefit. So great was her distress, and so unfortunate her plea, and so magnificent her faith that her desire was granted and a grateful mother clasped to her heart a recovered daughter.

But that Syro-Phoenician home is not the only household darkened and saddened by a child's calamity. There are tens of thousands of homes all over this broad land, in which the mothers could truthfully say: "My daughter is grievously vexed with a devil." Whether we accept the doctrine of demoniacal possession or not, we are all conscious of the fact that there are all about us children who act as if they were possessed of devils.

In the very first family of which there is any record, the first born son was a murderer, and his hands were stained with his own brother's blood. What was Eve's anguish as she looked for the first time into the pale face of death! Jacob had a large family, but his boys nearly broke his heart by their deception and jealousy. Solomon had but one son, Rehoboam, but he was a conceited, spoiled child, and the first act of his reign was to split the kingdom asunder. Solomon is credited with being the author of the proverb "Spare the rod and spoil the child," and he evidently practiced what he preached. David's son Absalom broke his heart with his perfidious behavior, and the centuries have throbbed with his bitter wail. "O Absalom! my son, my son Absalom! my God, I had died for thee, O Absalom, my son, my son!"

History is full of such instances. Fathers searching for wandering boys. Mothers weeping in silence, refusing to be comforted over wayward daughters. Homes are darkened that would otherwise be bright, hours are weary that would otherwise be light, pillows are wet with tears that would otherwise be soft. There are sleepless hours, and aching hearts, and grief-stricken sighs, because some son or daughter is grievously vexed with a devil. The devil of drink, the devil of lust, the devil of disobedience, the devil of ingratitude, the devil of wandering, the devil of temper, a whole brood of demons encamped upon the soul!

Oh, if youth, hot-blooded and inconsiderate, could for a moment realize how sharper than a serpent's tooth it is, to have a thankless child, if they could feel for an instant the point of one thorn, or the grown of which they are plating for their parents' brows, they would change their course of evil doing before another sunset. They would steady those aged limbs instead of digging pitfalls for trembling feet. They would lift the burdens from bending shoulders rather than add to the weight. They would make the present peaceful and the future roseate with hope. The Prodigal Son came home. It is true, in time to receive his father's dying blessing, but not until he had wasted his substance in riotous living, had lost his reputation and his character, had ruined his health and been cast out from the society even of his old companions in vice. The mighty, forgiving father love is shown in the reception that he received but there is little to commend in the career of the man who stayed away just as long as he could get a crust to eat and a rag to wear, and dragged his poor, miserable, wretched and ruined body home when starvation was staring him in the face, for his poor old father to take care of. That he came home at all was something; that he did not come before was deplorable.

Oh, the height and depth and length and breadth of parental love. It overleaps all barriers, it palliates where the world condemns; its mantle of charity covers a multitude of sins. That child must have gone very far astray whose mother turns against him. Courts may pronounce him guilty, but to her he is her baby, still, and she will go with him to the gallows, forgiving and forgetting all. God only knows how many mothers are this moment prostrate, crying, out of the bitterness of their spirit, "Have mercy upon me, my child, is grievously vexed with a devil."

A good complexion is impossible with the stomach out of order. If pasty, sallow people would pay more attention to their stomachs and less to the skin on their faces they would have better complexion. Kodol Dyspepsia will digest what you eat and put your stomach back in right shape to do its own work. Kodol relieves palpitation of the heart, flatulence, sour stomach, heartburn, etc. Sold by K. H. Trimble.
